DECATUR, ILLINOIS:
Tuesday, Evening May 25.

DOUBTLESS many persons have remarked the unusual abundance and fine quality of foreign fruit in the market at present. Statistics show that importations of foreign fruits and nuts during the month of March this year, was nearly double what it was for the same month last year. The fruit is generally of a finer quality and cheaper than ever before. In New York Messina oranges are selling at from $2.50 to $3.25 per box, as against $5 and $6 one year ago.

ORANGES IN FLORIDA.

From the Cleveland (O.) Herald.
One side of a story is good until you have heard the other side. We denied the statement of a correspondent of our morning contemporary, who—that is the correspondent—declared that oranges in Florida remained on the trees for a year, fresh and delicious at the end of the year as when they first ripen. And now comes an entirely reliable gentleman who says:
"You doubt the statement of a Florida correspondent about ripe oranges hanging on the trees without decay for a year. As I have spent three winters in Florida, allow me to say that correspondent is right. I, myself, have eaten sweet oranges that have hung on the tree the year round, and have eaten sour oranges that have hung on a tree two summers. These oranges that so long are good, sound, juicy fruit. This was on Dunn's lake. Florida oranges that hang after the new crop starts lose their juice, which returns to the tree, and in the fall fill up with the juice like the new crop."

THERE are rumors that we may get a southern road to the Pacific before we expect it, although it would be not exactly the way we want it. Our southwestern roads through Texas already reach within fifty miles of San Antonio, which is only eighty miles from Laredo, on the Mexican border. The Mexican Government is said to be committed to the plan of subsidizing a road across that country from Laredo, through Durango, to Mazatlan, and as the distance is only five hundred miles, it would not be a great undertaking for Mexico. There is no objection to our having this railroad, except that it might interfere with our having a better one. Mazatlan is not San Francisco, nor is Mexico California, and the proposed road would fail to give us that competition with the Union Pacific which we have so many reasons for desiring. It would not lighten the burden now levied on the through traffic to California, nor on the intercourse with Asia; but it would not be without its compensating advantages. It would open up a country already traded largely with this city, and serves many valuable business interests all through the Union, and a country which is, moreover, capable of illimitable development; and then the road would not cost us anything. At any rate, we could afford to close up our gap of one hundred and thirty miles.—St. Louis Globe-Dem.

WHAT is required to regenerate the South is subsoil ploughs, phosphates, agricultural implements generally, a large increase of horses, mules and harnessed cattle, a steadily increasing supply of steam engines and machinery, and such manufacturing machinery as can be moved by water power. These, with a comparatively small amount of cash capital, and a few earnest men to teach their use and value, would in a few years make the South bloom like a garden, and develop a population as loyal as that of any Northern State during the war. The interests of Northern capitalists require them to supply these potent agents at the earliest practicable day.—Judge Kelley.

He Denounces Theodore and Grant in Plain Terms.

NEW YORK, May 24.—In the Beecher trial this morning Porter resumed argument for the defendant. He referred to the letter of contrition, which was the only known instance in which a man had written a letter to himself. How did it happen? This man, who was master in every intellectual department, when he came into Moulton's presence was like an untutored school boy. Another feature of the letter was the fact that Beecher refused to sign it. Moulton was a sham from the beginning, and strutted in proud plumage. Tilton, as a literary writer, bore the foremost name of any man in America, and had given out the idea that he was a man of boundless wealth. These two statements were put forth to the world by Moulton, copied from Tilton's drafts or were the result of a fortnight's work on the part of Butler. It was Tilton who gave directions for carrying out the scheme. It was in his fertile brain that they had their birth, and Moulton spoke of crushing Tilton if he injured Beecher. The declarations of Tilton, Moulton and Mrs. Moulton all bear the stamp of Tilton's mind. That word "paroxysm"—referring to a kiss—was never heard from Beecher's lips except by Tilton and Moulton. The words "Standing on the brink of a moral Niagara" were not Beecher's but Tilton's words. Counsel commented on the form of the letter—"I ask, through you, Theo. Tilton, your forgiveness, and humble myself before him as I do before God. He would have been a better man in my place than I have been." Did Beecher write this? If he did, which did he mean, God or Tilton, would have been a better man in his place? The language used in the letter precluded all idea of the charge against Beecher being adultery, and the man who said Beecher wrote it lied and was untrustworthy. Counsel referred to the letter of May 3 '71, from Mrs. Tilton to Beecher as her pastor. Was that the letter of an adulterer to her paramour? It had more the strain of a broken-hearted woman to a man she had faith in. Never did Beecher use the term "nesthiding." He had written books and books, and counsel on the other side had searched them in vain for that term. Fallerton, in Norway, found reference to Robin hiding her nest and which he (Fallerton) paraded before them. You could not go to hear Beecher on Sunday next without being impressed with his vividness and impressiveness, and which reminded one of Shakespeare and Homer. Referring to other letters, counsel said: "What led Tilton and Moulton to lie, as they said for Beecher? Moulton said he lied for tenderness and delicacy to Beecher and Plymouth church, and Tilton for motives of the same character towards his wife. Could Tilton have these feelings and those which led him to bastardize his own dead boy, and to seek to ruin his adopted daughter? Both of these witnesses, in their testimony, had expressed themselves malignantly, which rendered their testimony comparatively worthless. If the jury believed the testimony of Wilkeson and Jackson S. Schultz, what was the character of Tilton? A man who had broken and violated all his pledges. Tilton was living on black mail for a number of years. Ready to accept in the form of benefactions or otherwise. Why did Tilton threaten to blow the roof off Plymouth church, unless they acceded to his wishes? Was it not soliciting help from Beecher, when, according to Mr. and Mrs. Ovington, Tilton said that Elizabeth loves Beecher and he ought to do something for her. That Elizabeth both had done all she could for him, and he ought to come forward to help her. Tilton, speaking of his wife, said she would be for him if necessary. Was this the use Tilton put the woman to? Was this the school in which Mrs. Moulton had been reared? Moulton said Beecher was a liar and a libertine, that was the reason he had broken faith with him. He admitted also that he had broken with Tilton. There was no person with whom he had not broken faith; and was this man, on whom no person seemed to place reliance, to be believed when he maligned Beecher? He had threatened to shoot Beecher; but this was mere bravado, and the man who could make such a threat, without intending it, was of a low order of morals.
Court took the usual recess.

After recess Porter continued: Moulton in describing Beecher as a liar and sneak, correctly described Frank Moulton and Theodore Tilton. If their blood were transfused it would find as black a resting place in the heart of one as in that of the other. Porter then spoke of the improbability of a lady's saying to a gray haired clergyman, as Mrs. Moulton said she did in her own house, that he had added four years perjury and lying to his original sin. She had then told him she believed she could confess it to the church and be forgiven. This story was monstrously incredible and refuted itself. Men who had meditated murder and talked of their wives lying for them were capable of devising such fabrication. Moulton was no unworthy consort of Tilton. He also had threatened to drive Beecher from Brooklyn. Tilton threatened this even on the witness stand, forgetting its fulfillment required the aid of each jurymen. The case of Franklin Woodruff was an instance, of how much one man can corrupt another. Woodruff, who would regret his action in this case while he lived, was hurried from one thing to another by the craft of Tilton and cunning of Moulton, until he was brought to the stand to deny the world of one of the most prominent merchants in New York, who was true and noble in every relation in life. Mr. Porter said he had many notes which he must discard, because they would protract his argument too far. Tilton said he had always thought of Beecher as a big boy, and in the next sentence accused Beecher of craft in taking advantage of an opportunity to gain advantage over the cross examining counsel. The story of Beecher's preaching to his mistresses, of which Tilton said he didn't know the origin, was said by Moulton to have been told him by Tilton himself, though pretending to be Beecher's friend. Porter then spoke of Tilton's threats to shoot Beecher, and said the jury was asked to condemn the latter on the oath of an assassin. In a letter to a complaining friend Tilton denounced the story of his wife's adultery as a lie raised by Bowen and Woodhull, and disclaimed any knowledge of the scandal article. And this while that article was telegraphed over the whole land. Tilton was in love with the woman who published it. She was "white souled," but after this libel on his wife he quarreled with her. He didn't put in a vindication, not because he loved his wife less, but because he loved Bowen more, and feared Bowen would be crushed by Beecher. This impudent cuckold (turning to Tilton) who comes into court flourishing a pair of antlers, not his own, and asks you to tip them with gold. This cuckold submitted his report for the adoption of the committee after Beecher's return. This report didn't contain a word about Mrs. Tilton's adultery, in his own handwriting. Theodore Tilton, knowing all the facts, thought this report would reflect credit on all concerned. This is a document prepared by Tilton and borne to Beecher by Moulton on the 14th of July. They were about to entrap Beecher into the use of language in that document before the committee, and leave the alleged offense committed by him unadmitted. In the long report, Tilton admitted the falsity of his own accusation. He didn't know that the law said what one man wrote for another to sign was evidence against himself. Porter read the report prepared by Tilton for the committee, and briefly commented thereon. Three days after he told the story of his wife's adultery, she left his roof. He certifies here the apology did mean adultery. It was a mixed affair. The paper of the 14th exonerated Mrs. Tilton and Beecher, and that of the 20th stigmatized them as shameless, exposed and confessed adulterers. Porter entered into an elaborate analysis of the letter of contrition. The argument was, that Moulton had written the words, and Tilton had run his pen through them to correct them. Speaking of Beecher's "Life of Christ," and of Fallerton's remark about the possibility of Tilton writing the life of Judas Iscariot under certain circumstances, Porter exclaimed, "We might have suggested whether, if Moulton had happened to have been one of the twelve apostles Judas Iscariot would have pocketed those thirty pieces of silver." He spoke with great severity of the alleged pressure brought to bear upon Mrs. Moulton to make her swear falsely. A stir ran through the audience when the orator, with intense earnestness, exclaimed—"that story would never have fallen from her lips if God had not visited upon her the calamity of binding her. I hope not for life, to a man like Frank Moulton."

Judge Porter will conclude his argument to-morrow afternoon.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Secretary of War has granted permission to the Southern Memorial Association, with their friends, to enter Arlington Cemetery on the 1st of June, for the purpose of decorating the graves of Confederate dead, with liberty to use the grand stand, where the exercises, including the addresses, take place. The graves at Glenwood and Congressional cemeteries will also be decorated the same day. The decoration of Union graves in the several cemeteries will take place on the 20th of May.

COMMENTING on the adjournment of the Massachusetts legislature the Boston Journal says: "It brings with it a certain measure of relief to the general public. There is always a fear while the General Court is in session that some folly may be perpetrated, or some act rushed through that will affect public or private interests." It would seem that legislative wisdom does not rate much higher in Yankee land than in some other localities.

THE RUN TO KANSAS AND COLORADO.

The indications are that the rush to Kansas and Colorado will be greater than over in 1874. The shortest way to reach the Far West is through St. Louis, the great Mississippi Valley City, of over 450,000 inhabitants, and thence west over the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Short Line, which reaches all the great land grants in the West, and runs six fast Express trains, two more than any other road, between the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers. This road, in the last two years, has expended over one million dollars, besides earnings, in extraordinary improvement of roadway, in relaying its line with best quality of new steel and iron rails, on broad, new ties, and in passenger equipment, having substituted for ordinary cars all the latest and most improved and airy appliances for comfort and safety, being elegantly carpeted and fitted with dressing rooms, with toilet conveniences for ladies, gentlemen and families traveling with children, free of any extra charge. Any ticket agent selling through tickets to the West will furnish tickets on this excellent route through St. Louis, over the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Short Line, the best and shortest to Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska and Montana, the Great West, it being the only line running through cars between St. Louis and Omaha. For map, circulars and time-tables address either F. A. Palmer, Indianapolis, Ind.; or E. B. Groat, St. Louis, Mo., either of whom will furnish information desired. [Jan 8w]

THE LECTURE LAST EVENING.

A small audience gathered at the court house last evening to listen to the discussion of the temperance question, by Dr. R. N. Davies. At a few minutes past eight o'clock Rev. Dr. Buck introduced the speaker, who said that, while his audience was small, he felt confident that it was select.

The speaker then proceeded to say that in their efforts to suppress the liquor traffic temperance people were everywhere met by the inquiry, why should this branch of commerce in which, not millions merely, but billions of capital are invested, be suppressed? The question, he said, was a reasonable one, and was entitled to a satisfactory answer, and those who advocate anti-licensing should be able to give good and sufficient reasons for desiring their principles to triumph.

He proposed to offer few reasons which, to his mind not only justify the advocates of entire prohibition in their opposition to the liquor traffic, but call upon all persons having the wealth of the community at heart to use every legitimate means and influence at their command to wipe out this business and banish it from the country.

The first reason assigned for desiring the extermination of the liquor traffic, was that nobody was benefited by it. Every cent spent for liquor was money thrown away.

The second reason was that the sale and use of intoxicating liquors were the fruitful sources of crime, poverty and misery. These thoughts were ably elaborated, and the positions taken by the speaker were fortified by statistics of a truly startling character.

The lecture was interspersed largely with the observations and experience of the lecturer as to the evils growing out of the liquor business, and held the undivided attention of the congregation.

As observed at the opening of this article, the audience was small, and the absence of most of those who, a year ago, seemed to be all absorbed in the temperance movement, must have been very disheartening to the friends of the cause that were present. Many who at that time sang the loudest and talked the longest, and in their zeal were ready to throw their hats as high as the clouds, are now as silent as the grave, and an able advocate of the principles which they so ardently supported a few months ago, comes to stir up their minds by way of remembrance, they have not interest enough in the subject to encourage him by their presence. To say nothing as to their agreement or disagreement with Dr. Davies in the positions he takes, we are frank to say that it is a burning shame to the professed friends of temperance in Decatur to allow so able a man to address so small an audience.

POLICE NEWS.

John Longweller, a gay country youth from the vicinity of Macon, was riled somewhat yesterday afternoon by hearing a stone buzz past his ear. He fancied he saw the man who hurled the missile, and he followed him for some time, and at last caught him at Mills' confectionery. Longweller pulled off his coat and was just commencing to pound the man, when he was interrupted by the appearance of policeman Wilkinson. He then put himself on a peace footing, and accompanied the officer to Squire Albert's court, where he learned—much to his disgust—that the man he had been pummeling was not the one who threw the stone, but "another fellow." He was fined $3 and costs, and left in the officer's custody, crying "Injustice," in a loud, plaintive tone. On discovering that he was to go to the calaboose, he gave up his watch for security, and sorrowfully went homeward.

PAST DRIVING.

Last evening Farmer Kern and Capt. W. P. Ferris got to disputing as to which of the two had the fastest horse. Ferris had the lead and when Kern attempted to pass him he "let out" his animal, and the two were soon trotting through the principal streets of the city at a 240 gait. Ferris kept the lead, led Kern and put his horse up in the livery stable. Passing by Justice Hughes' office he was hailed by a police officer. On being informed that he must pay five dollars and costs for his offense to the city laws, he immediately paid that amount.

Farmer Kern was arrested this morning, taken before the same Justice and fined an equal sum. He paid the required amount without a word, but he still is of the opinion that his horse can make better time than the Captain's.

VANDALISM.

Telegraph Poles Cut Down.

This morning Mr. J. C. Bullington, operator of the Great Western Telegraph Company at this place, received a letter from the operator at Bloomington, giving a detailed account of the damage some vandals had done to some of the company's property near that city. The letter says that Mr. E., on finding that the line could no longer be worked between Bloomington and Decatur, he set out, to ascertain the cause. Near Hawthorn, a little hamlet south of Bloomington he saw that several poles were prostrated. On examining them he found that they had been hewn off near the ground, and the wire had been broken in places.

Laborers were at once set to work to repair the damage done, and the line is to be in running order this evening.

Couldn't Make the Trip.—On yesterday a tolerably well dressed young man went into the restaurant on East Main street and ordered an oyster supper.

While he was eating the boys about the establishment were very busy, and the fellow thought, when he had disposed of his oysters, that he saw an opportunity to slip out without paying. Promptly he slipped out, and he passed out through the back way, but what was his dismay when he found himself confronted by the brick wall which separates the restaurant from the REPUBLICAN office, and on the east by a high board fence, which separates the back shed of the establishment from the back grounds in the rear of Smallwood's clothing store. Seeing his dilemma, a desperate jump he scaled this fence, but still found himself surrounded by impassable barriers in the shape of brick walls. As the fellow jumped the fence one of the boys employed about the restaurant noticed the movement, and suspecting that he was "jumping" his bill, told "Gus" Ansbach, who was in the front store, what was up. "Gus" at once dodged around through Smallwood's store and confronted the fugitive, who was already badly puzzled as to how he should make his escape. As a penalty for his meanness he was made to jump back over the fence, where employees of the restaurant awaited him, and taking him in charge made him disgorge fifty cents for his stew, and then booted him out at the front door. The next time he eats oysters he will probably "come down with the dust."

WELLINGTON, Lorain co., Ohio, August 24, 1874.

R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir:—Your medicines, Golden Medical Discovery, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, have proved of the greatest service to me. Six months ago no one thought that I could possibly live long. I had a complication of diseases—scrofulous, manifesting itself in eruptions and great blotches on my head, that made such sores that I could not have my hair combed without causing me much suffering; also causing swollen glands, tonsils enlarged, or "lick neck," and large and numerous boils. I also suffered from a terrible chronic catarrh, and in fact I was so diseased that life was a burden to me. I had tried many doctors with no benefit. I finally procured one-half dozen bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery and one dozen Sage's Catarrh Remedy and commenced their use. As first I was badly discouraged, but after taking four bottles, I began to improve, and when I had taken the remaining I was well. In addition to the use of your medicine, I took Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and in fact I was so diseased that life was a burden to me. I had tried many doctors with no benefit.
